

Hello, my name is Mortimer. I'm from England. Normally, I live in the Middle Ages, in a castle in the village of Ivybridge. I live there with my family and my friends. But some time ago, my friends Malcolm the dragon, Betty the bat, my teacher Uncle Godfrey and I travelled through time.

Here in the future we found new friends: Rachel, her brother Harry and their parents. They are very nice and we live in their house. It is very interesting here, but I miss my mum and dad. Uncle Godfrey is working hard on a magic trick to take us back home. Let's see what happens this time!

Minerva teaches the children in the castle. Rachel is watching the lesson because she wants to become a teacher when she grows up. Today they learn the alphabet and to count to one hundred. Therefore, Minerva has spread wooden numbers on the floor so that the children can form the numbers. Guinevere, Morty's six-year-old cousin, loves counting. And she loves Rachel, who is sitting next to her on the floor.

"Guinny, please form the number seventy-nine," Minerva says and the girl correctly forms the number. "Well done!" says Minerva.
